May 2016 If you're building a website from scratch, you'll want to know what HTML is and how to create the best design. The truth is that HTML is a simple markup language, and with a little knowledge, you can create almost any design you want. In this post, I'll go over what HTML is, how to use it, and why you should never set aside 10 minutes to learn it. Understanding HTML Starts With Knowing What It Is If you've never worked with HTML, you probably think of it as text with tags and special formatting instructions. Think again, HTML is way more than that. HTML was originally invented so that a page could be read online instead of having to print it out. It allows a page to have custom designs and graphics to really convey the message. HTML Elements and Attributes An HTML element contains the visual and graphic design of a page. As 648931e174

A: You can use (setq gnus-url-methods ("gnus-url-read-message". "gnus-url-read-message-body")) or, maybe better, use: (setq gnus-url-methods ("gnus-url-read-message". "gnus-url-read-message-body" .else "gnus-read-message")) As Twitchy reported yesterday, Rep. Maxine Waters (D-CA) appeared on a radio show this morning, and repeatedly claimed that the Trump campaign is running fake ads on her website. Those attacks led a few bloggers to notice that some of the ads on her site (which has since been removed) looked awfully similar to the ones that had appeared on Fox News. Obviously, it was a coincidence. Enter Waters' husband who has now joined his wife in accusing the Trump campaign of creating the ads. Waters' husband, Morris "Mo" Deeds, says that the Trump team took a "hit list" of Democrat Congressmen and have been running ads against them every day since Waters' controversial comments. Our friends at Twitchy reached out to Mo, who didn't provide an example or screenshot of the ads that are allegedly "fake" and Mo's
